The stomach is affected with loss of appethe and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memry, accompanied with a painful senation of having left undone somehing which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

NINETEENTH CENTURY RELIGION.

A reader of the True Nontherner has sent the following for publication:

Or stay below. I used to go To meeting, a few years ago, When things were of another sort, And pursons did not sinners court. Then they believed in bell, you bet; Good brimstone with a sulphur jet. And told the sinners that in it They'd roast, like partridge on a spit, And never be quite done enough-Ob, I tell you, old hell was tough, And terrified the unforgiven-It fairly scared us up to heaven.

But now the parsons are more kind, Call bell a torment of the mind.) And say it cannot be God's will That poor humanity should grill Forever in a lake of flame. That's mighty mee; but all the same I like the old time hell the best : I like to think, when I am blest. I can look down from joys eternal And see some chaps in fire infernal.

God bless the good old meeting helt; It suits some sinners mighty well. The chaps that engineered the deal In Alta, or a Savings steal: The vast majority of quacke, The friends of a protective tax, Perhaps a journalist or two. A sprinkling out of Kearney's crew, And a few local limbs of law Would smell much better roast than raw.

See here-I was raised orthodox. And hold by burning wayward flocks. Others may not. For instance Beecher, Who fears the flames may reach the preacher: That saintly sinner's head is level To take his kingdom from the devil, And every har, rogue and thief May bold with comfort his belief. But if we have a hell at all It ought to burn like vitriol; For if their mind's their punishment, Most people wouldn't care a cent; A witch of old, by such a rule, Should have a custioned ducking-stool The cat-o'-nine-tails ought to purr, And have tails made of gossamer, And every gallows should be railed And have the drop securely nailed.

No, no. I don't want any church Where they use roselesfs for the birch : I don't want parsons who will tell Of seed champagne on draft in hell. In spite of every divine I'll take the brimstone straight in mine. And if I find hell isn't hot. Why, twon't be run as it had ought.

MOTHERS AS DOCTORS.-Practical mothers learn much by their experience with the little bodies entrusted to their care. Some of the most common sense facts in the physical culpractice of these four simple rules, much of sex. the physical, mental and moral suffering in life would be avoided by parent as well as child-If a healthy child (and a delicate one proportionately) is regularly put to bed about dark in a quiet, well ventilated, or even cold room. after a supper of plain food, it will naturally awake at daybreak, good natured, with a keen appetite for a wholesome breakfast. Nutritious, plan food, at regular hours, with no candy or stimulants, and tree bathing, help the system to ward off many prevalent ailments, and to bear with much less danger the few that must necessarily come to the majority of little ones The child that is given a little confectionery, or any unsuitable food, and then rocked to sleep should cause no surprise at waking, poevish and feveral). It is simply the result of imaginary affection and want of knowledge on the part of the one in charge. It will certainly pay in the end to search diligently for the cause when a little child is proverbially cross .-- Chicago Alliance.

THE BENEFIT OF LAUGHING .- Dr. Greene, in his "Problem of Health," says there is not the remotest corner or inlet of the minute blood vessels of the human body that does not feel some wavelet from the convulsion occasioned the inward man, is abaken to its innermest depths, sending new tides of life and strength to the surface, thus materially tending to insure good health to the persons who moderately indulge therein. The blood moves more rapidly and conveys a different impression to all the organs of the body as it visits them on that particular mystic journey when the man is laughing, from what it does at other times, For this reason every good hearty laugh in which a person indulges tends to lengthen his life, conveying, as it does, new and distinct stimulus to the vital forces. Doubtless the time will come when physicians, conceding more importance than they do now to the influence of the mind upon the vital forces of the body, will make their prescriptions more with reference to the condition of the mind, and less to drugs for the body; and in so doing will find the best and most effective methods of producing the required effect upon the patient.
